Subject: Now it finally makes sense!

Hello Ed,

I have always wondered why you make so darn many requests for information, when most of your questions and/or concerns could be handled by having a direct conversation with the District Administrator. Sometime, anytime, at least once during the course of your first full year on the Board. (Personally, I believe you are afraid of Crystal:) But now it all makes sense. The information requests were not just for you, but instead for other(s) in the public, so they may use them as their resources for writing mailbag letters. Pretty clever Mort. Now I am finally beginning to fully understand how your accountability game works. Nice job!

Sincerely,
Judd

PS - Please do me a favor in your next round of requests from the administration: Ask them how many public tax dollars were spent copying each board member a full ream or more of paper, so we can have the same vitally important information as you . Oh yeah, you might want to ask for records of all the staff time it takes our employees to gather these requests, as you and I both know they probably have nothing better to do. Keep up the good work!
